

Law Firm-Funder Partnerships in a Time of Economic Uncertainty

04/30/20

Partner Jordan Goldstein will join a group of lawyers for a webinar discussing the current climate of economic uncertainty and the enormous challenges faced by law firms and their clients involved in or contemplating litigation. Clients need to pursue and defend business critical claims while preserving capital, and firms must maintain the continuity and profitability of their litigation practices. In the midst of this, a recent NYC Bar Association report advocates for a new partnership between lawyers and litigation funders - a partnership that could open a new path forward for lawyers and litigants across the nation as they get access to funding that can help them navigate this period of unprecedented economic upheaval.

Key takeaways include:

- What the report says and why it's important not only for lawyers in New York but across the nation
- How lawyers can work effectively and ethically to pursue litigation funding for themselves and their clients in this challenging time
- Ways that law firms and funders can co-market their services to clients and prospects; and
- What the future may hold for law firm-funder relationships as we exit the crisis.
