

Executive Crisis Management and Employment Disputes

Selendy Gay's partners have extensive experience representing companies, boards, and executives in employment-related and governance disputes that jeopardize reputations, compensation, and business models.

We have successfully litigated and swiftly resolved civil, regulatory, and criminal matters as well as internal investigations in matters involving forfeiture of restricted stock units and other executive compensation, allegations of fraud, fraudulent transfer, self-dealing, breaches of fiduciary duty, and misappropriation of trade secrets and other confidential information. We help clients anticipate and prepare for multi-dimensional risks that threaten their personal and corporate brands and finances, and we provide practical and timely advice to navigate these risks and turn them into opportunities.

We also have deep expertise in independent investigations involving particularly sensitive matters that could be subject to significant press coverage, including sexual misconduct and corporate culture. And because female partners make up 50% of our equity ownership, we bring an invaluable perspective and significant credibility to the clients we represent.
